COVID-19 RESEARCH

LEVELS OF TRAUMATIC STRESS EXPERIENCED BY COMMUNITIES WITHIN U.S.A. WHILE COPING WITH COVID-19

Lead Researcher: Dr. Ani Kalayjian

ATOP Meaningfulworld is recruiting participants for a research study about level of traumatic stress symptoms as a result of the COVID-19 global pandemic. The objective of our research is to determine the level of traumatic stress experienced by communities within the United States of America, such as yourself and others who are coping with lock-down measures and physical distancing because of the pandemic. We understand that American communities face many hardships including forceful withdrawal from physical spaces of work, school, university, sports, theaters, gyms, and other recreational and social activities. Therefore, our research will assess the different levels of traumatic stress that you and other members of these communities may have experienced due to the struggles associated with coping with COVID-19.

Eligibility: 18 years of age or older, who reads and writes English and lived/ is living in the United States during the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Participation: It takes less than 10-minutes to click on the following link and complete the questionnaire.

Gift of Gratitude: You will be eligible for a raffle drawing to win a $50 Amazon gift card and a chance to participate in our full-day workshop on self-care.

You are a gift: Your input will help us understand the impact of the pandemic in the quality of life of our communities.
