

The Other Side of Love
Dr Ani Kalayjian

*Love may appear to hurt us,
Only to teach us a positive lesson!*

*Love may appear to frustrate us,
Only to enhance our potential!*

*Love may appear to anger us,
Only to guide us to our inner peace!*

*Love may appear to restrict us,
Only to show us the way to expansion...*

*Love may appear to change others even us,
Only to motivate us to grow!*

*Love may appear to fail us,
Only to make us resilient!*

*Love may appear to dominate us,
Only to help us set ourselves free!*

*Love may feel like its choking us,
Only to encourage our release!*

*Love may appear to possess us,
Only to show us how to be secure within!*

*Love may appear blind,
Only to awaken our insight!*

*Love, as we know it, may appear to end,
Only to help us develop true unconditional love...*

Object of love is to serve, not to win (Woodrow Wilson), so let's stop the race and embrace...

Kalayjian, A. (2012). The other side of love. Trauma Psychology Newsletter, Spring-Summer 7 (2), page 20

DrKalayjian@Meaningfulworld.com